

DAVID KIDD
Managing Partner and Founder

David Kidd is the Managing Partner and Founder of Adirondack Growth Capital. He is responsible for identifying target companies, meeting with business owners, conducting due diligence, structuring the transaction, negotiating deal terms, and ultimately managing the acquired company.

Prior to founding Adirondack David was a Vice President at Lincoln International, a middle-market investment bank based in Chicago. While at Lincoln, David provided M&A advisory services to private business owners, private equity firms, and Fortune 1000 companies. He has completed over 25 transactions since 2004. Before joining Lincoln, David was a management consultant at A.T. Kearney based in Alexandria, Virginia. As a member of A.T. Kearney's strategy practice, David worked with Fortune 500 companies to improve sales forecast effectiveness, operations and productivity improvement, performance measurement, customer retention, and reimbursement management.

David earned an MBA from Stanford where he was an Arjay Miller Scholar. He holds a BS in Accountancy and a minor in Technology Management from the University of Illinois, graduating with Highest Honors and Bronze Tablet distinction. David is active in the Boy Scouts and is an Eagle Scout. He resides in the western suburbs of Chicago with his wife and son.
